Saab and Loomis Group sign Global Framework Agreement for a Secure Transport Logistic System

Defence and security company Saab and Loomis Group have signed a global framework agreement for the use of Saab's TRACK and TRACE system. The agreement is signed for seven years.

The framework agreement consolidates already existing agreements between Saab and Loomis Group and includes the use of the TRACK and TRACE system in four new markets.

"We are excited about this new agreement and look forward to continuing our successful partnership with Loomis to jointly develop and deliver their key operational system across their global operation. Our solution will support them in consolidating their systems portfolio and standardising their operational procedures and support. The agreement also supports expansion into new markets," says Jonas Hjelm, head of Saab business area Support and Services.

Saabs offers a system called TRACK and TRACE that provides customers with a secure logistic solution for different kinds of transportation. With this solution a user can gain full control over their logistic services through a work-order based system that manages, monitors and measures all services provided for the end customer. The system also creates an operational audit trail from commitment start to final execution, which facilitates having full control throughout the entire transport logistics chain. The system can also be used on mobile platforms.
