Saab establishes strategic cooperation with Polish company WB Group

Saab has established a strategic cooperation with the Polish technology company WB Group. The two companies aim to explore potential cooperation in areas including UAV systems, naval solutions and border protection systems.

The agreement was signed on 2 September at the international defence industry exhibition MSPO in Kielce, Poland in the presence of Peter Sandwall, State Secretary to Sweden's Minister for Defence Pål Jonson.

"This marks another significant step in Saab's commitment to advancing strategic defence capabilities between Poland and Sweden. Partnering with WB Group enables us to share expertise and scale up innovation to deliver cutting-edge solutions for national security," says Micael Johansson, President and CEO of Saab.

WB Group is a Polish technology company offering state-of-the-art solutions for armed forces internationally.

Saab is a leading defence and security company with an enduring mission, to help nations keep their people and society safe. Empowered by its 26,000 talented people, Saab constantly pushes the boundaries of technology to create a safer and more sustainable world.
